Art Unit: 1723

Applicant's election without traverse of group II and the species shown in FIG. 5a in Paper No. 5 is acknowledged.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1, 9, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Pulek et al.

With respect to claim 1, Pulek et al disclose a tubular filter product (see FIG. 9) including a plurality of melt blown fibers (see line 21 of col. 5) formed into a tubular body defining an outer surface 80 and an inner surface 82, the body defining a pattern of cavities 78.

As to claim 9, Pulek et al disclose the cavities as including exposed recesses (e.g., defined by the diffusion medium 76) extending into the outer surface.

Regarding claim 10, Pulek et al disclose localized areas corresponding to the cavities as being of greater melt blown fiber density than an average melt blown fiber density per unit volume associated with the tubular filter product since the cavities are formed by piercing in a manner similar to applicant's disclosed process (see lines 22-28 of col. 10).

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 9, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Storey et al in view of Pall et al.

With respect to claim 1, Storey et al disclose a filter product (see FIG. 2 and line 7 of col. 1) including a plurality of melt blown fibers (see lines 35-46 of col. 1) formed into a body defining an outer surface 8 and an inner surface 20, the body defining a pattern of cavities 26. Storey fails to specify a tubular filter product. Pall et al disclose that it is known in the art to produce non-woven tubular filters and suggests that such an arrangement facilitates connection of the media a filter housing. It would have been obvious to have modified the filter of Storey et al so as to have been formed as a tubular product as suggested by Pall et al in order to facilitate connection of the filter media to a filter housing.

As to claim 9, Storey et al disclose the cavities as including exposed recesses extending into the outer surface.

Regarding claim 10, Storey et al disclose localized areas corresponding to the cavities as being of greater melt blown fiber density than an average melt blown fiber density per unit volume associated with the tubular filter product since the cavities are formed by heat and pressure (see lines 56-66 of col. 1).

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
